

The Post

£844,000 may be spent on car parks

THE COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF LONDON has agreed to spend up to £844,000 on car parks in the City of London. The money will be used to build car parks in the City of London and to provide car parking spaces for the City of London. The Council has agreed to spend up to £844,000 on car parks in the City of London. The money will be used to build car parks in the City of London and to provide car parking spaces for the City of London.

The Council has agreed to spend up to £844,000 on car parks in the City of London. The money will be used to build car parks in the City of London and to provide car parking spaces for the City of London. The Council has agreed to spend up to £844,000 on car parks in the City of London. The money will be used to build car parks in the City of London and to provide car parking spaces for the City of London.

The Council has agreed to spend up to £844,000 on car parks in the City of London. The money will be used to build car parks in the City of London and to provide car parking spaces for the City of London. The Council has agreed to spend up to £844,000 on car parks in the City of London. The money will be used to build car parks in the City of London and to provide car parking spaces for the City of London.

The Council has agreed to spend up to £844,000 on car parks in the City of London. The money will be used to build car parks in the City of London and to provide car parking spaces for the City of London. The Council has agreed to spend up to £844,000 on car parks in the City of London. The money will be used to build car parks in the City of London and to provide car parking spaces for the City of London.